

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people in the private sector has increased from 17.5 million to 20 million (Department for Work and Pensions 2002).

There are a number of reasons for this increase in public sector employment. One of the main reasons is the increasing demand for public services, such as health care, education and social care. Another reason is the increasing number of people who are unable to find work in the private sector, and who therefore turn to the public sector for employment. A third reason is the increasing number of people who are employed in the public sector on a part-time basis, which has led to an increase in the total number of public sector jobs.

The increase in public sector employment has led to a number of changes in the way that public services are delivered. One of the main changes is the increasing use of private contractors to deliver public services. This has led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services. Another change is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to deliver public services. This has also led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services.

The increase in public sector employment has also led to a number of changes in the way that public services are funded. One of the main changes is the increasing use of taxes to fund public services. This has led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services. Another change is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to fund public services. This has also led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services.

The increase in public sector employment has also led to a number of changes in the way that public services are managed. One of the main changes is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to manage public services. This has led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services. Another change is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to manage public services. This has also led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services.

The increase in public sector employment has also led to a number of changes in the way that public services are delivered. One of the main changes is the increasing use of private contractors to deliver public services. This has led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services. Another change is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to deliver public services. This has also led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services.

The increase in public sector employment has also led to a number of changes in the way that public services are funded. One of the main changes is the increasing use of taxes to fund public services. This has led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services. Another change is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to fund public services. This has also led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services.

The increase in public sector employment has also led to a number of changes in the way that public services are managed. One of the main changes is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to manage public services. This has led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services. Another change is the increasing use of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to manage public services. This has also led to a number of problems, such as the increasing cost of public services and the decreasing quality of public services.